form school, young Whitesides became penitent and assured the judge that he had meant no wrong.

"Although you are amenable to the laws of Ohio, I don't intend to have you punished," the court said to Whitesides. "I think that you were influenced to take part in this affair and that you did so without knowing the wrong you were committing."

The boy thanked the judge for his kindness and promised that he will fight shy of any such advertising games of the kind in the future.

Thursday evening, Justice Conley received information to the effect that the proposed marriage was devised as nothing more than an advertising scheme, and he immediately notified the theater management that he could not officiate. Later the manager tried to get Justice Thompson to do the work, and he likewise refused.

EARLY FRUIT CROP
NEARLY DESTROYED

Loss of Thousands of Dollars Sustained

Marion County Fruit Growers Say Cold Has Done Great Amount of Damage.

Practically all of the early fruit crop of the county has been almost completely ruined by the snows, frosts and cold weather of this month following as it did the almost midsummer weather of March.

Warm weather with bright days and occasional showers during the month of March brought the fruit to a stage where the frosts could do the most damage and true to the predictions of local weather prophets the county crop is a failure.

The late fruit, it is stated, is not damaged as much as the earlier crops and under average conditions a fair amount of fruit will be secured. It is expected that prices for fruit that is home grown will be higher this spring and summer than for many years in the past.

The exceptional weather has worked much hardship on the farmers and much of the work done by them during the month of March has to be entirely done over again.

During the month the amount of rainfall has been very heavy and the scarcity of warm days has permitted the soil to dry up very little. In lowlands which even at this season of the year, is generally dry enough for plowing, the farmers have been unable to do any plowing and nothing can be done until the water that covers the ground is drained away.

Unless there is a marked change for the normal within a short time Marion County farmers will lose many thousands of dollars.

MOTHER OF FREDDIE

Asks the Police to Stop the Marriage

License is Returned and the Court Roundly Scores Those Implicated in the Matter

Mrs.—not Miss—Fanny Donavin, and Mr. Frederick E. Whitesides will not be married on the stage of the Family theater this evening. The reasons are that the groom's mother won't let him, and besides, no magistrate or minister in the city would agree to perform the ceremony.

The news that young Whitesides, height, four feet and 11 inches, and weight, 89 pounds, had secured a license to marry Fanny Donavin, short and stout, weight reputed to be 175, was published in all of the city papers this morning. At Pittsburgh, the home of young Whitesides, the story was published and was read the first thing by his mother, Mrs. C. E. Whitesides.

About 10 o'clock this morning came a telegram from Mrs. Whitesides to the local police department. She said that her boy is only 15 years of age, and she asked that the proposed marriage be prevented.

Before the police could take a hand, Manager Vail of the Family theater, became cognizant of the fact that trouble was brewing for some one. He was not certain that any share of the trouble would be for him, but he resolved to take no chances.

Vail, accompanied by his assistant, Arthur J. Baum, looked up the diminutive Whitesides and said it would be best to call the marriage off. The proposed groom secured his license, and the trio took it to Probate Judge Foster, where it was duly cancelled.

Judge Foster then asked the theater managers and young Whitesides for an explanation.

According to the information given to the judge by Manager Vail, it had been the intention at first to give a mock marriage, and to have Whitesides and Mrs. Donavin as the contracting parties. It would be a good advertising scheme for the house and for the supposed bride and groom, they thought.

Thursday morning, after getting the license, Manager Vail called on Justice Charles H. Conley and arranged to have him perform the ceremony. Under this arrangement, the ceremony would really have made the mismatched couple man and wife.

The judge severely censured Vail and Baum for entering into such an arrangement and permitting a boy like Whitesides to swear to false statements, as he had done in getting the marriage license. He took an oath that he was 21 years old and that Mrs. Donavin was 23, when the fact of the matter is that the proposed bride is in the thirties. He also told the judge that Mrs. Donavin had never been married. She stated Thursday afternoon that she was divorced a number of years ago. When told that he had committed perjury, and under the laws of Ohio could be sent to the Lancaster re-
